NEW BEDFORD MAN WINS PRAISE FOR SAVING TWO LIVES

Aug. 12, 1917.

William A. Roos.

William A. Roos, a member of the Harvard Unit, No. 44, of the U. S. A. A. C., now in training at Allentown, Pa., won the praise of his comrades last Sunday when he was instrumental in saving the lives of two young men, one of whom would have drowned but for the bravery of Mr. Roos. The latter was too modest to write much concerning his act, but friends of his forwarded an Allentown paper to his parents here giving a full account of the incident. The canoe in which were two boys, 14 and 16 years of age, overturned in the Lehigh river, and both boys were thrown into the water.

...rican Policeman, Retired on Pension

Daniel Meehan, Oct. 13, 1917.

Daniel Meehan, a member of the police department, who has been granted retirement as a patrolman on a pension, has been a resident of New Bedford for 33 years. He came to this city from New Haven and for thirteen years was employed at the Morse Twist Drill. He has been house man at station 3 for the last three years and for the seven years previous acted in the same capacity at station 4. During the first ten years of his service he was a patrolman. He was injured once in the discharge of his duty when in making an arrest in the north end of the city about twelve or more years ago, he was borne back by the man he was arresting upon a spike which protruded from a wall in the place where the arrest was made. The spike was forced some distance into Mr. Meehan's back and he was unable to attend to his duties for a few weeks as a result of the injury.

At the age of sixteen, Mr. Meehan enlisted in the first Connecticut cavalry for service in the Civil war. He was wounded twice before he was seventeen and taken prisoner once, but because of a serious wound in his head which had been made by a bullet in a scrimmage just before his capture, he was released on parole and sent to a hospital at Fredericksburg. He was twice transferred from there, once to Richmond and later to Baltimore. Although his injury entitleh im to a furlough of sixty days after his recovery, he refused to take it and was sent to Washington to do mounted police duty. Mr. Meehan was in Washington at the time of the assassination of President Lincoln.

JUDGE JOHN W. GOFF, AT PRESENT JUSTICE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF NEW YORK, WHO AS A YOUNG MAN HELPED JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY IN PLANNING EXPEDITION.

HERO WORTHY OF A HOMER'S SONG.

A Tribute to Captain George S. Anthony Written for The Standard by Hon. John W. Goff, Justice of the Supreme Court of New York.

All the heroism of life is not expressed in the comparatively few acts or expressions which have the setting of great historical events affecting men and nations. Not infrequently do those acts and expressions, which may in themselves be commonplace, depend upon the tragic or dramatic surroundings which appeal to the imagination of men, and which, by the aid of the poet or fertile historian, receive the acclaim of generations. In contrast, are there not often brought to our attention deeds of men in the humble walks of life that manifest the highest degree of courage and devotion to a principle? For such seldom do paeans of praise resound, and oftentimes the only reward received is a man's own consciousness of having done the right thing at the right time, without fear and without compromise. This was a prominent trait in the life of Captain Anthony. Modest and unassuming, he addressed himself to the thing in hand, determined to do that thing and do it with all his force of character, without regard to its future effect, so long as he believed it to be right and to rest upon him as a duty. Fresh from the altar he parted with his young bride upon an expedition which was fraught with peril. Its success, because of its danger and of the almost insurmountable obstacles to be overcome, was indeed problematical. Yet despite all the longings for his home, and the desire for the companionship of his young wife, he faced those perils armed only with a determination to overcome those obstacles if human courage and skill could do so. Failure meant to him a great loss, not only in the material things of the world, but in his prestige as a young mariner. Success held out no promise of golden reward, but it did stir the chivalry in his heart, and was of such a character as would leave an impress upon the world's history. Added to his great qualities of skill and courage, there was the inestimable virtue of prudence. Silent, watchful, persistent, he left no point unguarded, no atone unturned. Reckless courage might have defeated his purpose. He proved to have it when necessary, but with a judgment almost amounting to genius he refrained from putting it to the test until the crucial moment of action arrived.

Striking the manacles from the limbs of those prisoners chained to penal servitude for life, he did an act worthy of a Homer's song, and his splendid defiance of arrogant British naval power should be a monument to American seamanship as long as the Stars and Stripes fly the ocean.

Thousands who never knew Captain Anthony will revere his memory. Those who did know him personally will through life treasure the acquaintance, and enshrine him in their memory as one of the simplest, truest and bravest of men. Peace be to him.

Percy Astin, of this city, a member of the royal flying corps and stationed in Canada, is in the city for a few days and is being kept busy by his friends, telling of his first experiences as a flying man. Astin is an aerial gunner instructor at the University of Toronto and has already been up in the air several times at his position behind the gun in the front or within the flying machine.

"Straight flying is rather disappointing," he said today when asked about the feeling which he experienced on making his first flights. "You know," he said, "I expected so much but I really found very little to enthuse over. Of course, it makes a difference when it comes to doing stunts."

Astin expects to leave this city Wednesday in order to be back at his post on scheduled time. He is a member of the Workingmen's club. Together with Harry Ashworth, he left this city several months ago and both were successful in getting into the corps. Ashworth is now engineman and propeller swinger in charge of the machine of Vernon Castle, the famous dancer, now located at Deserbato.

"On the morning of the 23d our oiler, while attempting to reach his quarters, was twice washed overboard and back again, receiving a severe fracture of the knee. He was later sent to a hospital at Malaga, Spain, for treatment."

Kouble enlisted the day before Easter, 1917. He has complained of lonesomeness. He reports that Red Cross outfits have been distributed to the boys, for which they were sincerely grateful. He is enjoying the new life, however, and occasionally meets New Bedford boys in the service. He wishes that more New Bedford people would write to him. He expects that the order to go across will be received before many months. He finds his training in the High School cadets of great service now.

WATER-FRONT VETERANS OF THIRTY YEARS AGO

Oct. 7, 1917.

"United Order of the Sons of Rest. Open at all hours, excepting Grub Time. Per Order Committee." And as though this wasn't enough, he decorated the bottom of the door with a skull and cross bones. Sons of Rest was a fanciful name, but since one of the members had taken the trouble to select a name someone else undertook to elect officers. Russell was named for president, West for treasurer, Conway for vice president, and Holmes for corresponding secretary. So far as any business the officers conducted, they are doubtless still in office. All the men in the picture are living with the exception of Burgess and Holmes.

The midship house in the picture came off the old three-masted schooner Hopeon. John Richardson, who was then a whaling agent, bought the schooner and refitted her as a bark, and in changing her over the midship house came off and fell into the possession of Mr. West. The Hopeon was afterwards lost up around Greenland. The picture was apparently taken about scallop time, as several of the men in the group are apparently resting a minute from their labors, though the men still have their cutting aprons on. When Harry West moved his boat business further north he took along the old midship house and for a number of years used it in his present location, until later on he bought his present house. The old house fell into disuse and not long afterwards was broken up.

olks used to loaf along the water t years ago just as they do now- s. The picture shows a group n some thirty years ago on what then known as Jim Doull's ", located between what is now 's wharf and the steamboat to the north. Harry West ran house there, had boats to re does today, and the on the wharf was a rendezvous for water front veterans of the day. In the picture there are five men and two boys, the latter junior members, who doubtless happened along just in time to have their pictures taken. The men in the picture looking at it from left to right, are Edward Russell, sitting down; Harry West, James Gilbert Burgess and Alonzo

Those who gathered in the old house had no formal name by which they called themselves, but one day, Russell, the artist of the company, had nothing else to do and he proceeded to decorate the house door with fancies of his mind. At the top he painted on the word "Office," and what he painted on below this word

Girl Who Joined Navy in Order To Do Her Bit

Yeoman Madeline Sherman.

"I am anxious to do my bit for Uncle Sam and when women were given the opportunity to join the navy I jumped at the chance. Life under navy rules and regulations is not ver easy for a girl who has always bee used to going and coming as sh pleased but when you think that yo are serving your country you don mind it half as much."

So said Yeoman Madeline Sherman U. S. N., who was in this city las night on her way from the Nava Station at Newport to the station a Nantucket. Yeoman Sherman en listed in the navy last April short after war was declared, resigning good place as a stenographer in a architect's office. "The duties of th women who are serving as yeoman i the navy are not unlike those in an or dinary business office," said Yeoman Sherman. "We have to do stenog raphy and typewriting and are eac detailed to some separate departmen The department that we are assigne to varies with our rank. The ch yeoman is invariably assigned to t commander's office. They are ve strict about the way in which we our work and the least little erro charged against us. They are very strict about our deportment w in the office and if the girls get a tle boisterous they are severely proved."

When asked what regulations w the hardest for the girls to beco accustomed to Yeoman Sherman sa that many of the girls had found hard to be subject to sudden transfe She said many of the girls had en listed in Newport because their hom was there and that they found it pre ty hard to be sent away to other st tions with scarcely a day's notic "And if we complain of being homesic they tell us that girls in the nav aren't supposed to be such babies to give in to their feelings."

The girls who have enlisted are for four years or the duration of t war the same as the men. At so of the stations they have been giv uniforms but at the station in N London, where Miss Sherman been, they have not received the u forms as yet.

officer of armed guard aboard an American transport. After leaving New Bedford soon after the outbreak of the war, Ensign Burgess was assigned to the U. S. battleship Georgia, serving aboard the vessel for six months. At the end of this time he was transferred to an army transport. He is now in command of two gun crews, being the only New Bedford man aboard his present vessel.

He crossed over to France last month with a consignment of American troops destined for the trenches, and arrived back safely the other day, paying a hurried trip to his parents in this city.

While over in France he made the acquaintance of a young American who had been in the French aviation corps for the last three years, having recently received his discharge on account of failing eyesight. He was given a gas mask by his new friend, and brought it back home with him as a souvenir.

Born and brought up in New Bedford, Ensign Burgess is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver W. Burgess, 32 Parker street, and graduated from the Parker street school. During his career at the High school he was corporal in the cadets, while he spent four years with the sixth deck division of the naval brigade. When the school for cadets was opened in Boston some years ago, he was one of the two sent from New Bedford, and graduated as an ensign a year ago last September.

He likes the life in the navy first rate, and experienced many exciting incidents in his recent trip across water, records of which he is k until the war is over.

HERE'S A DOG THAT LOVES TWO MASTERS

William A. Mackie, vice president and cashier of the First National bank, is here shown scolding his dog for being naughty. This is the famous dog which formerly belonged to Charlie Bracey, and which was adopted by Mr. Mackie while Charlie was out of town for a few months. The dog has been out too late altogether, a good dog, and is hearing the latest banking laws on the length of a dog-day. "His Master's Voice," Mr. Mackie's friends call the portrait. Charlie, who once owned the animal, is also shown, where he sometimes sits beside the bank.

2155 PAGES OF EVIDENCE

City Clerk Remington Is Custodian of Precious Document.

Many Persons Who Would Like to Be Alone with Report for a While.

No, patient reader, this is not a picture of last year's files of the Congressional Record. It is merely the report of the councilmanic investigating committee which was submitted for the perusal of the city government last night. Bound in yellow covers, with flamboyant red lettering, it ought to make one of the season's best sellers if it was put into print.

The Report Compared in Size with a Copy of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. Nov. 23, 1917

The report is in 26 volumes and consists of 2,155 pages of evidence and several hundred more pages of "exhibits." There are 68 exhibits in all. City Clerk Walter H. B. Remington, who is the custodian of the precious document, said this morning that he did not know whether or not it will be open to the gaze of the public. He said he would ask for an opinion on this matter from City Solicitor Benjamin B. Barney.

There is no doubt a whole lot of persons in the city who would like to be alone with that report for a half hour or so, but, it is believed, there isn't one of them who has nerve enough to ask for it.

Councilman George D. Lacroix exhibited great eagerness to get at the report last night, and could hardly wait until it had been turned over to Mr. Remington by Clerk of Committees Charles P. Sawyer, who had charge of it during the few minutes it was before the lower branch of the government. Mr. Lacroix followed the report downstairs to the city clerk's office and rapidly glanced through a few of the volumes. [illegible] last night, saying [illegible]

HISTORICAL FEATURE OF PATRIOTS' DAY PARADE.

Was Carried By the Pupils of the Fifth Street Grammar School in the Peace Jubilee Parade Held in This City July 4, 1865.

An historical feature in the Patriots' Day parade which will bring back memories of years ago to many of New Bedford's grown up citizens of today will be an old banner to be carried by the children of the Fifth street grammar school which was carried by the pupils of that school in the Peace Jubilee Parade held in this city on July 4, 1865. Ever since that date it has been preserved in the hall of the school, and Superintendent Smith decided that it would be an appropriate occasion this week to bring it out and exhibit it in the parade again.

In 1865 New Bedford had what up to that time had been a record parade, and there was a reviewing stand erected on Union street which held all the school children of the entire city—a stand which today could not accommodate a tenth of the school population. Many citizens who have since risen to positions of business or political prominence marched behind the banner on that day and among them who were in close proximity to the flag were Clarence A. Cook, George E. Briggs, [illegible] Thomas Thompson, George E. Macomber [illegible]

OMPOSITE FLAGSTAFF FROM MASTS AND PARTS OF OLD VESSELS

Aug 12, 1917.

William H. Tripp Boasts a Quaint Flagpole Fashioned From Ships that Once Sailed on Every Sea—Cross-Trees From the Old Rousseau

lagstaffs are, as a rule, as devoid character as beanpoles. They are t and short, surmounted by a gild- ball or by brass from a curtain one-step or two-step according he ambitions and the purses of owners. There is in New Bed- however, one flagstaff which is her out of the ordinary. It be- to William H. Tripp, a book- at the First National bank, and e found in his yard at 165 New- reet.

flagstaff of Mr. Tripp's is a ole; and yet an old one. It is le staff, and yet many. It is s stiff and motionless as a dead nd yet it has moved and danced ys at once on the seven seas. to be too mysterious, this flag- is a composite pole, whose in- parts were once portions of on pleasure and whaling craft. nstance, its lower mast was the of the Ellen Swift; its mainmast he mast of the catboat Vanora. t by Frederick Slocum. Its rees long gathered dust in Peter 's rigging loft, and came from ld ship Rousseau or the Jireh probably the former. The hoops came from the bark Morn- ar; the topmast from the cross- up are from the broken t'gallant of the bark Bertha. These parts assembled and made into a flag- y Mr. Tripp himself, and rigged ohn Enos Souza, Peter Black's rigger. And the whole is sur- ted by a whaleship weather vane was the workmanship of Mr.

blows, and -winged asy to uplex gins to groan within itself and struggle against its imprisonment, stiff and stark on dry land. Each piece will seek to follow its calling,—to strain after the old, oily wharves where the whalers lie; to lean towards the floats where a gay pleasure boat dances at a boathook's end.

The look-out trembles for the feel of bare sailorman's meet. And if wooden staffs ever indulge in memories, each part recalls its past, scents tropic monsoons that blow over coral islands, scents keen, shrewd breezes from the icebergs of the north. It leaps again in fancy to the surging rise and tumultuous fall of the broad Atlantic, and staggers and reels and dances in the furious gales of the ill-named Pacific, and when all is done, shivers to find itself stiff, motionless, and dead,—in the backyard on Newton street.

One of these days, however, it will learn that its present occupation of upholding the Stars and Stripes is a prouder one than ever was its lot, when it held the straining canvass of an old-time whaler. This is a pleasant ending, for so many parts of old ships; a hereafter to ship's masts that is like the Indian's dream of the Happy Hunting Ground, or the old tree's dream of eternity in a forest. And when you go by, one of these days, you will observe how it holds itself erect and proud, transfigured under its task of upholding the flag.

ALCOCK KILLED IN AIR CRASH

New Bedford Aviator Collided With Another Airplane in Texas.

Fell 2000 Feet to Instant Death—His Machine Demolished.

Wilfred C. Alcock of this city was instantly killed Saturday while flying in an airplane at Taliaferro field, Fort Worth, Texas, as the result of a collision with another machine, at an altitude of 2,000 feet. Mr. Alcock had arrived at Fort Worth only a few days previous, having been transferred there from Canada to complete his training as a cadet in the Royal Flying Corps. News of his death was received in this city in a telegram addressed to his uncle, William J. Mills, with whom he has made his home.

The airplane with which Mr. Alcock collided was driven by Cadet Thompson of Canada. Both machines were demolished and Thompson was seriously injured. On Friday, Cadet Biddle of England was fatally injured when his machine crashed to the ground, and on Saturday Cadet Gish of Canada was probably fatally injured when his machine fell from a high altitude.

Mr. Alcock was very well known in this city. He was formerly organist at the County Street Methodist Episcopal church and secretary of the Cercle Gounod. He left this city for Desoronto, Canada, some months ago, to enter the Royal Flying Corps, and while at the Canadian aviation camp he won high commendation from the officers for his skill in handling the machines. He was in an accident just before leaving Canada, when his motor stopped dead 2,000 feet in the air, but he glided down to a landing and escaped with negligible injuries.

Mr. Alcock was manager of the News Publishing company of this city. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Alcock of Caxton House, Nutsford, England, and is survived by his father and mother and a sister.

NEW BEDFORD BOY NOW IN ENGLAND

Hugh B. McDonnell. Former Member of Old Fourth Co., Lands on Foreign Soil.

James McDonnell of 144 Merrimac street has received a letter from his son, Hugh B. McDonnell, reporting his arrival in England as a member of the third company of the 101st ammunition train attached to the 26th division of the American Expeditionary Forces. The letter was mailed from Southampton on October 19, and bears the mark of having passed the censor.

Young McDonnell is only a little more than eighteen years of age, and while in this city he worked for his father in the grocery business. When war was declared he volunteered and became a member of the old Fourth Co., C. A. C., and he left the city with that command when it was called to Fort Banks. With eighteen other members of the company he was picked for transfer to an organization recruiting for overseas service. His letter tells the story of his arrival in England:

Dear father:

Just a few lines to let you know that I am well and happy, hoping all the family is well. I am somewhere in England where I remain but a few days. We had quite a rough voyage coming over. I made a few dollars cutting meat on the way over. We are stationed at an American camp, but there are thousands of British soldiers near us. It is a beautiful country, but our camp is quite muddy; it rains every day. This is about all that I can say at the present time. We cannot say much, but I will write often. My address is:

Hugh B. McDonnell, 3rd Co., 26th Division, 101 Ammunition Train, American Expeditionary Forces.

Word was received yesterday by Thomas J. Murray of 95 Dunbar street, that his brother, Peter Robinson, was safe and well, and at the present time is located in a recuperating hospital for wounded soldiers at Woldingham, Surrey, England. The letter received yesterday was the first news heard from Corporal Robinson since Christmas, and his relatives and friends in this city had given him up as lost on the battlefields of France, as several letters and packages which had been forwarded to him at different times had been either returned

THE FIRST POLE TO ENLIST HERE

John Wolkowicz Could Not Wait Until the Formal Date.

Popular North End Young Man Handed in His Name Last Night.

John Wolkowicz of 148 North Front street, unable to wait until the official opening of the drive for recruits for the new Polish army at the Strand theatre this evening to volunteer his services and, if necessary, his life to the land of his birth, last night enlisted under his colors and was registered as the first New Bedford man to do so. Mr. Wolkowicz is one of the most popular young men among the younger Polish element of this city. He is interested in athletics, is a member of the Polish Falcons' Alliance, and is regarded by the recruiting officials as a splendid drawing power for further enlistments.

The first mass meeting in the interests of stimulating recruiting in the Polish fighting forces will be held at the Strand theatre on Acushnet avenue this evening. There will be out-of-town and local speakers and it is hoped and expected that there will be

Nov. 25, 1917

Antone Sylvia, first class private in the 20th Cavalry, Battery F., and stationed at Camp Logan, Houston, Texas is back in the city for a few days furlough with his relatives and will stay over Thanksgiving. Some time, next month they expect to receive their orders to cross the water for the trenches, and they were given a taste of actual warfare when they took part in a raid down in Texas the other day.

Private Sylvia is already carrying around two identification tags, one of which is wrapped around his waist, while the other is around his neck. He also sports a medal for good behavior, composed of a bronze center piece set in a silver background, and engraved, "American-German war, 1917."

The trip from Texas took him four days, and he will be allowed eight days in the city, when he will visit his friends.

[illegible]tires from the Fire Department After a Service of 24 Years

E. E. A. Cowen.
Sept. 4, 1917.

After twenty-four years of service in the fire department, during most of which he has been driver of the engine at Station No. 1, Edward F. A. Cowen has retired because of ill health. Mr. Cowen was appointed a member of the department in May 1893 under the late Chief Macy. He was substitute driver for a year and then was assigned to drive the engine at Station No. 1 where he has been ever since. His retirement went into effect at 7 o'clock this morning.

Throughout his term of service Mr. Cowen never had an accident and never received a reprimand. Although Station No. 1 was built in 1871, forty-six years ago, it has had only two engine drivers in all that period. By a coincidence both served the same length of time, twenty-three years. The first driver was the late James Bryant who died about a year ago.

...CON MILL INCREASING PLANT 30 PER CENT.

Sept. 9, 1917.

...he steadily increasing popularity ...he Beacon blanket in all parts of ... country is forcing repeated ex-...sion of the Beacon Manufacturing ...mpany's plant in this city. The ...ove picture shows the latest addi-..., a great structure 800 feet long ... an average of about 130 feet wide. One story high, with saw-toothed roof, this gives the Beacon mill over 100,000 square feet of additional floor space.

The Beacon plant is laid out so that it can be readily enlarged in every department. Any necessary expansion is accomplished simply by building a new structure on the west side running the entire length from north to south. The saw-toothed roof gives ideal lighting conditions which makes possible the high quality workmanship on which the Beacon reputation has been built up.

The addition shown above enlarges the productive capacity of the Beacon plant by about 30 per cent. Machinery is already installed in part of it, but it will not be entirely completed and equipped for some months.

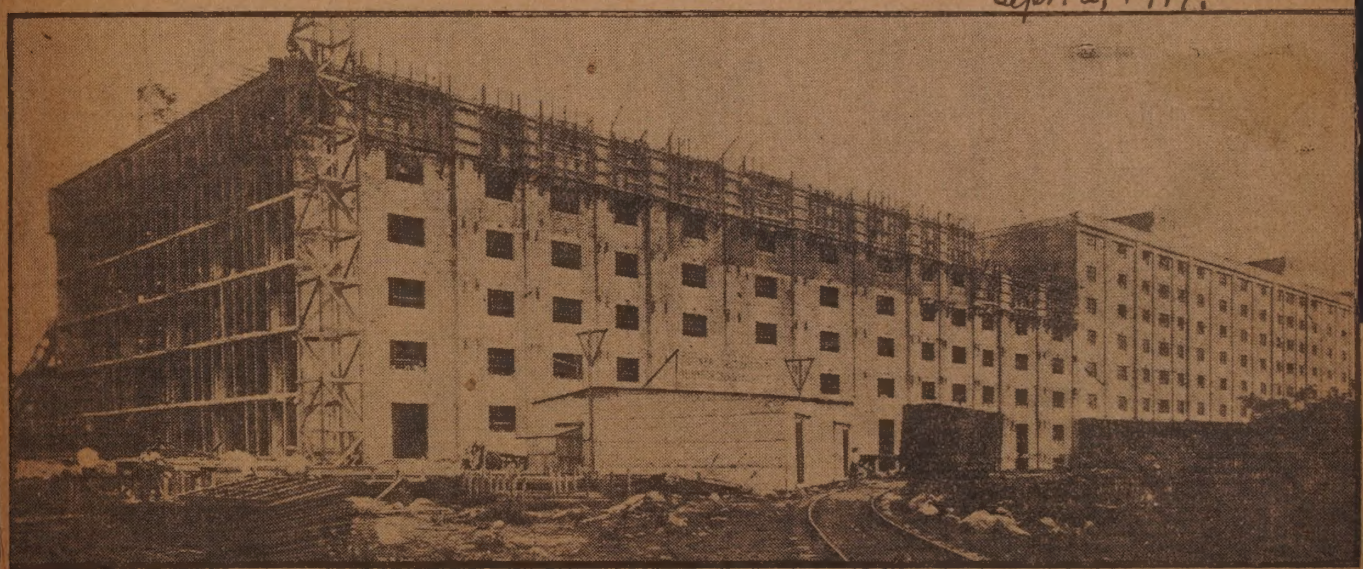
NEW BEDFORD'S COTTON STORAGE CAPACITY INCREASING FAST

Sept. 2, 1917.



New Bedford is growing at a very ...tisfactory rate as a cotton manu...facturing center, but it is expanding ...ill faster as a cotton storage point ...n which mills in other parts of New ...England may draw for quick ship...ments of cotton. This is illustrated ...y the above picture showing the big ...addition to the Belleville warehouse at its present stage of construction. Six of the eight stories are already up, and the rest of the work is being rushed to completion in the expectation that this season more than ever before southern cotton shippers will forward cotton to New Bedford for storage purposes.

Some time ago it was conservatively estimated that there was 100,000 bales of cotton stored in public warehouses in this city, and this was more than one-third of the total in all public warehouses all over the northern and eastern states. It is known that one cotton firm alone had as much as 30,000 to 40,000 bales in storage here at one time this year. A number of southern shippers have indicated their intention of forwarding unsold cotton to this city for storage for the first time this coming season.

The Poet of the Mills One of the First to Voice the Idea of New Bedford's Having, in the Form of a Statue, a Fitting Memorial to the Whaleman.

"We honor the hero behind the gun,
Who shattered the foeman's fleet,
To the hero back of the poised harpoon
Like honor we should mete.

For his was a navy of glorious Peace
Great as that of victorious Strife,
At war against Want, and he won increase
In the comfort and joys of life."

"Nowhere in all America will you find more patrician-like houses, parks and gardens more opulent than in New Bedford. * * * "All these brave houses and flowery gardens came from the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian oceans. One and all, they were harpooned and dragged up hither from the bottom of the sea."
